In regards to Docket Number 2007-421-T

I feel passing a max rate tariff will be beneficial to both the consumer and the Moving industry as a whole.

This will give the individual moving companies the flexibility to service the customer while maintaining the profit margin needed to sustain our individual businesses.

There will be companies in the beginning who lower rates to a unprofitable level. Yet even those companies cannot maintain their business at a reduced level and stay in business.

If rates are set to a max rate tariff, we must still hold the individual companies responsible for a minimum level of service. Making sure we are not allowing any individual off the street to open a moving company. There will still need to be some control on who can service the moving public and under what conditions they are granted a license to provide that service

I will be available to attend the study group in needed.
